

FuelClinic.com Update - w/ Doc Miles

October 1, 2008 - Issue #001

We're working hard to make FuelClinic the best place on earth to track and improve your fuel mileage. As part of these improvements, we're opening new channels of communication - including this simple newsletter that will be published infrequently. I hope you find it useful! If not, unsubscribe instructions are in the footer. - Doc Miles (docmiles@fuelclinic.com)

1. Did you know? Eco-Driving can save you 24%

The average driver can improve their fuel mileage by 24% simply by changing the way they drive? "Eco-Driving" is a safe and easy way to decrease your fuel costs, increase your mileage, and still arrive on time.

+ For more: http://www.fuelclinic.com/index.cfm/page/fuel_saving_tips

2. Newest Feature: Twitter users needed to help test new feature

Do you love Twitter? So do we! We are adding a Twitter interface to FuelClinic. Using Twitter, you will be able to send "tweets" (text messages) directly to your FuelClinic account with the required fuel receipt information - and your account will be updated automatically.

If you are a Twitter user and are interested in being a beta tester for our new interface, please contact us at feedback@fuelclinic.com - and put "Twitter Beta Tester" as the subject line. Include your Twitter username in the email somewhere, and we'll update your account with it.

+ FuelClinic Twitter Guide (beta):

http://www.fuelclinic.com/index.cfm/page/twitter_guide

+ You can also "follow docmiles" using Twitter to follow the progress of testing.

+ If you don't yet know about Twitter - you can learn more at www.twitter.com

+ We are not associated with Twitter except as a user of their service.

3. Newest Report: How do you compare?

Where does your MPG or L/100km compare to others? You can now see how you "rank" among other users with similar vehicles. See the new report on your Vehicle Summary page. To see where you rank: log in to your account > click the name of your vehicle > scroll down to the bottom of the report. You see the new chart that displays your rank among other users with similar vehicles.

4. Account Upgrades: Vehicle limit raised for all users

We are happy to announce that we've raised the default maximum number of vehicles allowed in the free accounts from 3 to 5. We have had several users ask specifically for their limit to be raised, and we've been able to accommodate them. After reviewing usage and storage data for the last few months, I've decided that we could raise the limit for all users - so you can add more of the vehicles in your family or small business.

5. Suggestions? Comments? Favor, please?

While we are working on creating the very best fuel economy website we can for you, we need the help of satisfied members to help spread the word about FuelClinic to the rest of the drivers on the internet. We've added social book-marking links to several pages, including the homepage. Please take the time to share our website with any of these services you subscribe to.

+ Help us grow: <http://www.fuelclinic.com/index.cfm/page/encourage>

+ Latest Website News: <http://blog.fuelclinic.com/category/website>

+ Forgot

your Password?: http://www.fuelclinic.com/index.cfm/page/Password_Reminder

+ Comments, Suggestions: feedback@fuelclinic.com

As always - thank you for your time, ideas, and help!

- Doc Miles

docmiles@fuelclinic.com

To unsubscribe from these updates, send an email with the email address you want removed to unsubscribe@fuelclinic.com

This message was sent to members of FuelClinic.com - www.fuelclinic.com

Stay up to date, read the Fuelishness! Blog: <http://blog.fuelclinic.com>

Sent by: FuelClinic.com - 522 Hunt Club Blvd. #319, Apopka, FL 32703

"FuelClinic.com" is a project of Compendium Software Systems, LLC

Contents © 2008 www.FuelClinic.com